Dear Editor,

I'm taking this time to personally thank all Dillsburg and surrounding area business men and women who were so unselfish and generous to give donations to the Franklintown Community Fire Company for our annual festival in July. I have spent the past several months knocking on your doors and ringing your telephones, to find you all so responsive to our need. Collecting over 180 donations for the raffle will bring in much needed funds for our new truck.

Thank you all again, and I hope you can make it to the festival.

Band booster highlights

Another spring trip is now history. What a beautiful weekend to spend in Boston and its surrounding areas. As always Rohrer bus Service drivers were most helpful and provided us with a safe trip. The band and guard members cooperated themselves in a very responsible way. Thank you to all Chaperones. All in all the trip proved to be a very good learning experience and a real treat to see some of the New England area.

A special thanks to Dot and Leah Henry June Grove, Cindy Crusamano, Elinor Bowman, Doug Sebestny, Mari Bernholz and all those other parents who helped on the "Baggies" crew or assembled sandwiches. After hiking seven hours and 9.5 miles, the scouts set up camp at Thelma Marks Shelter. They pitched tents and ate freeze dried stew and rice. Family jewelry store has personal touch

By Chris Fiske

A small family jewelry store with a personal touch can be found at 103 South Baltimore Street, Franklintown. Lenigs Jewelry and Precious Metal Exchange.

Paul and Karen Lenig are the sole employees of the shop. They specialize in the sale and repair of precious stones. Paul Lenig is the proprietor and does most of the repairs on site. The stones coming toward make repairs are sent away for the proper work.

Gold alone is exchanged and repaired at Lenigs, however the majority of the business centers around precious stones.

When purchasing a precious stone, Mrs Lenig recommends the buyer first decide on the type and dimension of the stone. Once the stone is selected it is viewed and ground to the desired shape. Finally, the stone is buffed and smoothed.

Lenigs' jewelry store started as many new businesses do, from an occasional hobby, not a jewelry hobby, but first a two-way radio business. The two way radio then gave way to the now four year old jewelry store, Lenigs Jewelry and Precious Metal Exchange.

The jewelry store started to take shape as the Lenigs began to expand their hobby. Mr Lenig began to take an interest in his brother's jewelry business. Mr. Lenig, who says he is an avid student of life, began taking classes about precious stones and jewelry repair.

The business Mrs Lenig says, is a roller coaster. Some days you feel your work was worth all of the trouble, but on others those bad days, you wonder if it's really paying off.

The Lenigs feel their jewelry store offers affordable prices for the residents of this area. We have low overhead, so we can offer a wide range of prices," explains Mrs Lenig.

"There is tough competition, Mrs Lenig adds but we feel a small business gives the customer a personal feeling. The only extra a chain store can offer is a greater selection.

In addition to location, Mrs Lenig feels that the key to running a small business is patience, time, and good publicity. As a result of a March remodeling project, she feels the store is continuing to grow from a small hobby to a successful business.

Karen Lenig, above, in her newly remodeled jewelry store, Lenigs' Jewelry and Precious Metal Exchange, feels a small business gives the customer a personal feeling. Located at 103 South Baltimore Street, Franklintown, she and her husband, Paul specialize in the sale and repair of precious stones.
